THE GLOBE FOR 1892

Will call things by their real names and name them properly.

It guarantees to advertisers more than double the combined circulation of all other papers.

It will not waver in its fight for the development and prosperity of the New South, and it asks the patronage of all honest men.

AN OUTSIDE OPINION.

The Lincoln (Neb.) Herald, by J. C. CALHOUN, as good a democrat as ever shot lead through blue uniforms-himself a southern man says:

has smoked with great enjoyment many a package of the Durham product bearing on the sack the name of W. T. BLACKWELL. The man who invented the tobacco that gave comfort to every smoker in the land is now poor. He failed in business, but he failed honestly, and surrendered every dollar and all his property to his creditors. He is now a candidate for postmaster of the city of Durham, N. C., a place that would have been to day a crossroads village but for him, and there are men mean and small enough to try to step between him and the office and take it for themselves. If the people down there do not rise as one man and confer that postoffice on old man BLACKWELL, the whole world should unite in a boycott on every brand and kind of tobacco that has the name of the town on the label.

GONE AGAIN.

All the Methodist ministers are to con-

What a life they have! They are sent disgusted lot of humanity was dammed. here and sent there. They make friends -they get fairly started in the act of "keeping house" and some wise old fellow tells them that it wont do and they are sent to another town-sent to a strange place, and new friends must be made-new neighbors must be met.

It is an eternal clog dance on the face of the earth-and yet they are alway a jolly, clever set of men. There is no little home for them-no place where a green vine grows which they planted-no trees which are their own; no associations. It is trunks and boxes-it is going and coming-and going still.

Their lives are certainly lives of devotion-of self denial and cannot be filled with pleasure.

Yet they are in the work-they are striving to make the world better, and and many journeys ere it feels the little they accomplish much.

They prove the truth of the assertion that a rolling stone gathers no moss. Yet they are laying up an inheritance for another world-they are ministering angels. They call at the bedside of the sick and give comfort to those who are distressed. from a worldly standpoint, it must be pleasant indeed, viewed in the grander and broader light.

It is to be hoped that all will like their new charges-and Durham wants to se her men returned.

A PUSHING FIRM.

What the Home Paper Says About a Concern Now in This City.

The Goldsboro Daily Argus in talking about a furniture company which has recently opened in this town, has the following, which tells its own story:

So well and favorably are they known and so universally popular have they become by reliable dealings and courteous attention to the orders of their custom ers, that were the Argus to ask the question, to what firm does the above heading apply, the general reply would be Messrs. Royall & Borden.

Well, that is the correct answer. Messrs. Royall & Borden since they opened up a furniture business in Goldsboro have made marvellous progressand still they go forward

A Momentary Delay.

At first blush it would seem to be an impossible feat for a pedestrian—a poor, defenceless woman, at that-to successfully bar three entrances to the Brooklyn bridge. It took place on the Brooklyn side one morning last week, when the the Durham postoffice, advertised De-Every lover of a good pipe of tobacco | wage workers were hurrying to the metropolis, and a large assembly was kept in a state of suspense for minutes that seemed ages.

To explain the feat accomplished, you remember how the entrances are arranged-a ticket office on either side, between them two iron parallel bars to guide you through. Between these railings is a space through which you pass on to the "chopping boxes," where tickets are deposited, but if you have to purchase them you pass between a rail and

The old lady stepped into the middle space, and while the umbrella swung round like a tollgate bar, closing the space behind her, she reached over to the ticket office and calmly proceeded to open her purse, fumble a roll of bills, finally select one, and with both arms stop the passing of pedestrians until a

by the analogies of nature whenever we venture into the realm of the possibilities and the unknown, and there is no analogy in nature of something being given for nothing. The seed has to push through the ground to find the sun; the tree has to draw its sap up from unseen sources to whirl forth its buds; the obstacles of bark and fiber; the bird has to build its nest with careful endeavor wings beneath its breast; the gold has to be mined, the precious stone dug from the matrix; the diamond has to undergo fierce processes of grinding and scouring before its facets shine like living light.

Struggle is the rule of life. Were it otherwise it would seem as though we might all of us have been put upon the While the life is not pleasant, viewed planet in conditions of luxury and ease and eminence that would require no effort on our part, and leave us free for all the enjoyment the world affords. But what soft, untempered, worthless metal we should be in such case! It is the fire that tempers the steel; it is the hammer that welds it; the grinding, whirling stone that brings it to an edge. -Harper's Bazar.

A Poor Folk's Garden.

So early were collectors in California, and so universal was the interest felt in Europe over the new plants of the Pacific coast, that many trees of sequoias and other superb conifers were planted in the parks of England, France and Italy long before the discovery of gold. Wealthy Californians, as early as 1855, visiting Europe, were surprised to find how popular were the brilliant annuals, flowering shrubs, vines and trees of their own state. Returning they often urged neighbors to cultivate more of the native plants, but with little effect.

In Alameda county, a plain, uneducated Englishwoman of Lancashire yeoman stock was one of the first persons in all California to make a home garden of wild flowers from field and hill. I remember in my boyhood the passionate devotion that she showed to this pursuit. "It do be the best land the sun ever

The Juice of the Papaw Tree.

In his "History of Barbados" Griffith Hughes mentions that the juice of the papaw tree is of so penetrating a nature that, if the unripe peeled fruit be boiled with the toughest old salted meat, it quickly makes it soft and tender. Kersten also tells us that boiling meat with the juice of the papaw is quite a common thing in Quito.

Captain S. P. Oliver, writing in Nature, July 10, 1879, says, "In Mauritius. where we lived principally on ration beef cut from the tough flesh of the Malagasy oxen, we were in the habit of hanging the ration under the leaves themselves, and if we were in a hurry
